2002 LOCAL GOVERNMENT ELECTION – FINAL REPORT

Executive Summary

The Local Government Elections held on March 20, March 25 and May 20, 2002 were seriously flawed in at least 03 Municipal Councils, 03 Urban Councils and 22 Pradeshiya Sabhas, which comprised 9.0% of the 311 local government bodies polled. It is regretted that elections were not held in 53 councils in the North-East Province, despite two postponements and the current ceasefire. The 2002 LG elections differed from other recent elections in that violence and violations were concentrated on the day of the polls, and that too in a systematic and pre-meditated way to avoid the censure of the Commissioner-General of Elections by maintaining an intimidatory presence outside the polling centres.

A cumulative total of 726 incidents of violence was reported to CMEV during the three campaign periods, of which 365 (50.3%) were major incidents, including 01 Murders and 02 Attempted Murders. Though this may appear relatively peaceful in recent times, on election day an unprecedented 1777 violations were recorded, seriously compromising the democratic process in 979 polling centres. This too despite the fact that CMEV was able to comprehensively monitor only 68 local government bodies, which was just over 25% of the total.

The chief culprits during these elections were the UNP, supporters of which party stand accused in 55.8% of all Pre-Election violations, 46.7% of all incidents on election day, and 62.2% of all reports of post-election violence. In contrast, PA supporters were the alleged perpetrators in 19.7%, 06.9% and 18.9% respectively.

The new trend of heightened violence and intimidation on the day of polling does not bode well for future elections, since the Police is clearly unable and unwilling to intervene, and the Commissioner-General does not consider incidents directly outside the polling centre to be within his purview. Among the most violent incidents on the three days of the poll were 05 Murders, 07 Attempted Murders, 29 instances of Hurt, 05 of Grievous Hurt, 51 Assaults, 03 reports of Arson, and 90 acts of Threat & Intimidation.

The involvement of women in overt election violence is still relatively low, though a significant number of women are targeted by men during the campaign as well as on election day. Yet, disturbingly, CMEV's monitors have recorded an increase of women's participation in impersonation and illegal voting. More Women are still significantly "victims" of violence than "perpetrators".

A preliminary assessment of post-election violence during the first week after the poll was also made by CMEV, and here too a similar pattern of localized and personality-based violence was manifest. The problem is exacerbated by the fact that the major political parties appear to condone and countenance such blatant acts of violence and intimidation. Nor is the Police willing or able to take punitive action against these prominent perpetrators. Therefore, as the risks involved in acts of violence are minimal and the rewards tangible, the violence will only escalate each time.

Introduction

The 2002 election to Sri Lanka's 18 Municipal Councils, 37 Urban Councils, and 256 Pradeshiya Sabhas was held on March 20, 2002, March 25, 2002 and May 20, 2002, in all areas excluding the North-East Province. The 53 local government bodies in the North-East were scheduled to go to the polls on September 25, 2002, but this too was postponed for another 09 months.

The CMEV local government election final report is a composite of all these mini-elections. In each case pre-election violence consists of incidents up to the eve of the date of that particular election, and post-election reports account for violations up to three weeks from the day of polling. It is only in this manner that any credible comparative analysis of the election taken as a whole can be made.

Another difference between CMEV's monitoring of this election and the other major elections in the recent past, is the fact that we were only able to systematically monitor a representative sample of just over 25%, comprising 68 local government bodies located in 18 districts and all 08 provinces out of a total of 228 held so far. On the one hand, CMEV did not have the financial resources, nor the infrastructure to cover the entire country, and on the other, coming as it did so soon after the 2001 December Parliamentary Election, there was hardly any time to launch such an extensive operation from scratch. As repeatedly mentioned in other CMEV Reports and elsewhere, this inability underscores the urgent need for CMEV to have a permanent core staff and basic infrastructure, as opposed to the ad hoc, election-by-election operating style it is forced to adopt due to the lack of funds and infrastructure.

Pre-Election Violence:

A total of 726 incidents were recorded in the run-up to the respective elections. Of these 365 (50.3%) are deemed Major, while 361 were relatively less serious. One Murder, 02 Attempted Murders, 78 allegations of Hurt, 18 of Grievous Hurt, 173 Assaults, 33 Threats & Intimidation, 02 cases of the Misuse of State Resources, 40 Robberies and 18 acts of Arson comprise the major incidents, indicating that though this election campaign was less important than the general election that immediately preceded it, and though it was the first election conducted with the new UNP government in power, the level of violence was significant. 41 incidents (5.7%) involved the use of firearms, and 26 (3.6%) were directly polls-related such as the theft of polling cards.

Local government elections are traditionally the least violent of the country's elections, since there is less at stake than in the provincial, parliamentary or presidential polls. The fact that over 50% of all incidents reported were major ones is, therefore, a cause for concern. Moreover, as the electorates had just got over the sustained violence of the 2001 General Election and the extensive post-election retaliation, the cumulative violence of the 2002 local government election must be viewed as substantial and a disturbing pointer of future trends under the newly-elected UNP regime.

In terms of geographical distribution, again the evidence points to selective violence in areas where the powerful politicians involved share a history of intimidation, election-rigging and similar violations throughout the past decade or so. The fact that these outcomes are predictable and have been documented by CMEV and other local and international monitoring groups, and yet they continue unchecked, renders faith in the Sri Lankan electoral system dubious. Even at this stage, CMEV urges that the Commissioner of Elections, the Police and judiciary, the respective parties, the mass media and the general public take up this issue as an urgent priority in order to protect the sanctity and credibility of the democratic process in this country.

The highest levels of violence recorded were from Nivithigala PS (21), Minuwangoda PS (21), Ja Ela PS (19), Attanagalla PS (16), Gampaha PS (15), Nattandiya PS and Kesbewa PS (14 each) which echoes the statistics of the parliamentary election of December 2001, where many of the selfsame areas were of the greatest concern. In some areas such as the Hanguranketa PS, the intimidation was so complete that no one was willing even to risk making a complaint.

Of the 726 complaints received the UNP was allegedly responsible for 405 (55.8%), while the PA stood accused in 143 (19.7%). Persons of unknown political affiliation were the alleged perpetrators in 141 (19.4%) and the JVP in 14 (1.9%). This perpetuates an unhealthy precedent in the ruling party becoming embroiled in violence. From 1995 to 2001, the PA which was in power, allegedly caused over 50% of the violations in all the elections held during that period. In its very first opportunity since seizing control of the government, the UNP has been able to emulate its rivals, despite all its promises to the contrary.

Considering types of violations committed, the PA and UNP taken together are allegedly responsible for nearly 75% of all major incidents, and over 90% of all incidents in which the political party of the perpetrator has been identified. Thus, the pattern of two-party violence still prevails, though the larger share is now with the UNP, as it was during 1977 – 1994 when they formed the Government. During the run-up to the election the PA made 224 complaints, 183 of which were against the UNP and 39 against persons of unknown political affiliation. The UNP/F made 277 complaints, 133 of which were against PA supporters, 48 against persons of unknown political affiliation, and 73 against members of the UNP itself. This phenomenon of intra-party rivalry and violence in Sri Lanka, which became liminal through the preferential voting system, appears to be an invariable concomitant of access to power. Thus, very high levels of intra-party violence (26.4% of all UNP complaints) was experienced by the UNP at these local government elections, while in 2001, for instance, it was the PA that was in this position.

Of the 726 complaints received, 61 (8.4%) were made by women, reflecting 25 major incidents and 36 minor. Only one of these incidents involved the use of firearms, and 6 were directly polls-related. 23 of these complainants were PA supporters, 30 UNP supporters, 05 JVP and 03 of unknown political affiliation. The alleged perpetrators of these complaints were UNP (34), PA (15), JVP (01) and persons of unknown political affiliation (11).

Women are the alleged perpetrators in 05 incidents, 01 of which was an act of Hurt, 01 Grievous Hurt, 01 Assault, and 02 Threats. It is alleged in the complaints that four of these women perpetrators were PA supporters and the other was of unknown political affiliation. This is the first time that CMEV has provided comprehensive data on the gendering of election violence. Therefore, comparative analysis is not possible, but given the fact that women's representation as candidates in the election is only 1263, the violence against women is significant and a measure of the continuing brutalisation of our society.

Election Day Violence

CMEV monitored 54 PS divisions, 08 UC divisions, and 06 MC areas on election day, employing over 500 day-monitors located at individual polling centres, and 10 mobile teams. In addition, reports sent in by political parties, individuals, police complaints and other courses were documented and verified. A total of 1777 violations were recorded on election day, seriously affecting the voting in 979 polling centres. Firearms were used in 44 instances. Of these serious violations that compromised the outcome of the election in these centres, the UNP is the alleged perpetrator in 829 incidents (46.7%), the PA in 123 (06.9%), the JVP in 09 (00.5%) and persons of unknown political affiliation in 796 (44.8%). Thus, the UNP was held accountable for 84.5% of all incidents in which the political party of the perpetrator was allegedly identified. The UNP and PA taken together account for 97% of all violations in which the party affiliation of the perpetrator was indicated in the complaint, and this is a clear index of the monopoly on violence that these major parties perpetuate at each and every election in this country. The total number of incidents appears to be higher than during the 2001 Parliamentary election, and the seriousness of these incidents leaves

CMEV with no doubt that the election was seriously flawed in 28 local government bodies. 05 Murders, 07 Attempted Murders, 29 instances of Hurt, 05 of Grievous Hurt, 51 Assaults, 90 acts of Threat and Intimidation, and 03 incidents of Arson took place during the 09 hour polling period. The seriously flawed local government bodies are as follows:

In the following pages CMEV provides a detailed description of the flawed polling centres within each local government bodies monitored. The Table is separated by the date of election, with the first section (March 20, 2002) containing a comparison with the MFFE-PAFFREL interim report to demonstrate that there is general agreement between the two main independent election-monitoring bodies in Sri Lanka.

Post Election Violence

Post-Election violence increased significantly after the December 2001 General Election, which was a sad regression to the elections of the 70s and early 80s. In fact, this post-election phase actually spilled over into the campaign period of the local government elections. In the immediate aftermath of the LG election, however, CMEV recorded only 37 incidents, 23 against the UNP, 07 against the PA and 06 against persons of unknown political affiliation. Significant here too was the fact that 07 UNP supporters complained of violations by other UNP supporters, marking the fact that ruling party in-fighting is a recurrent phenomenon in Sri Lankan politics.

Of the 37 incidents, 22 were relatively serious, including 02 Attempted Murders, 02 acts of Hurt, 03 of Grievous Hurt, 08 Assaults, and 03 incidents of Threat & Intimidation. Firearms were used in 05 incidents, which is a relatively high percentage (13.5%). Attanagalla PS, Dodamgoda PS, Moratuwa MC, and Nawalapitiya PS recorded 03 post-election incidents each, but the vast majority of local government bodies did not report any incidents of violence at all.

GENDER AND VIOLENCE AT THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ELECTIONS

	Pre-Election (Campaign) Period (% of Total)	Election Day (% of Total)	Post-Election Period (% of Total)
No. of complaints made by women (women as victims)	61 (8.4%)	35 (2.0%)	11 (34.4%)
No of women as alleged perpetrators	05 (0.7%)	28 (1.6%)	nil

In recent years, stripping of women and overtly sexualised violence has been recorded, notably from the North-Western or Wayamba Province.

Women are under-nominated by all the political parties, and even in this local government election women constituted 4.8% of all candidates. Of the 1263 candidates nominated, 79 (1.8%) were elected to their respective local government bodies. This gender inequality is perpetuated within these bodies, with no women being selected by their parties as Mayors or Chairs of the Pradeshiya Sabhas or Urban Councils. Thus, it is clear that the major parties in particular need to ensure that women enjoy higher nomination percentages and, when elected, great access to positions of leadership.

Acknowledgements

CMEV wishes to record its appreciation of all those who assisted in the monitoring process, notably the Election Secretariat of the Police Headquarters as well as regional and local police officers, the Commissioner General of Elections and his staff, polling station staff throughout the country who extended CMEV all courtesy and support as well as the media for their invaluable cooperation in the public interest campaign against election violence. As always CMEV is grateful to the public who assisted in innumerable ways in this election monitoring exercise. But for the generosity of CMEV's funders none of this would have been possible, and we gratefully acknowledge their continued support and belief in our work.

Without the dedication and commitment of the CMEV Colombo staff, the provincial and polling division monitors, field coordinators and others, too numerous to mention individually, this exercise would not have been successful. We are grateful for their commitment and professionalism.

The Centre for Monitoring Election Violence (CMEV), which has monitored every national and regional election in Sri Lanka since 1997, was formed in that year by the Centre for Policy Alternatives (CPA), the Free Media Movement (FMM) and the Coalition Against Political Violence as an independent and non-partisan organization to monitor the incidence of election-related violence.
